Qualis Corporation Names New Vice President – Missiles and Space Former Missile Defense Agency Executive Accepts Post

Huntsville, Alabama, November 3, 2014: Qualis Corp. has named Mr. Carlos Kingston Vice President of its Missiles and Space Group. In his new role, Mr. Kingston will be responsible for directing current Qualis contracts in the national security missiles and space arena while also helping to develop the company's strategic approach to serving our nation's warfighters.

For the past 30 years, Mr. Kingston has held senior positions with the U.S. Army and the Missile Defense Agency (MDA). Most recently before joining Qualis he served as a member of the Senior Executive Service (SES) with the MDA as Program Director of the Ground-based Midcourse Defense (GMD) program. There he reported to Vice Admiral Syring – the MDA Director – and was responsible for managing the program to develop, test, produce, field and sustain our National Ballistic Missile Defense Capability. He managed a cross-disciplinary team of government and contractor civilians, and military personnel within the Program Office while being responsible for integrating the GMD System into the overall Ballistic Missile Defense System to provide a layer defensive capability for our nation and allied countries.

"I am extremely excited that Carlos joined the Qualis executive team," said Qualis CEO and President Elizabeth Morard. "His values reflect everything we stand for here, and I can think of no one else I would rather have leading this strategic group for our company. Carlos' accomplishments serving our country's national security efforts are a matter of record. In my mind, all Americans owe Carlos and his team at the Missile Defense Agency a debt of gratitude for all they have accomplished in keeping our nation safe from incoming ICBM threats. On behalf of the Qualis family, we are truly honored and humbled that Carlos has joined our team."
